THE ST. LOUIS FIRE.

THEILLING PERSONAL INCIDENTS AS RELATED

[From the St. Louis Republican, April 12.] Republican reporter called last evening on Mr. ost his wife by the terrible catastrophe which has en-We googaped room No. 375, on the fifth floor the libtle, facing on Fifth street. About he past one o'clock my write awake me with remark that there were loud voices on street, and we got out of bed to ascertain a cause. We saw smoke and the lurid glare in the sand my write with a learful presentiment of dang excisimed, "My God! the hotel is on fire and we middle." I immediately opened the door leading into and my wife, with a fearful presentiment of danger exclaimed, "My God! the hotel is on fire and we mustie." I immediately openes the door leading into the hall and found it filled with smoke. In the hope of reaching the stairs and getting below the smoke which was sufficiating, we tried to find out way on our knees. It was impossible. After few steps my wife fell on her face, over come, and I had literally to drag her bad into the room as best I could. The window was opened top and bottom, and so permitted the smoke the pass out. I then suggested that we should dress our pass out. I then suggested that we should dress our belves, hoping and expecting that reaches would present itself in some shape from the outside. The hea in the hall meanwhile broke the glass as the transon admitting a large volume of smoke. Mrs. Stewart be came suddenly wild, I may say I rantic. Hope seeme dead within her. The street below was choke with people, who could see us plainly by the light in the room, but from the sea of upturnelaces there came no suggestion of escape. I made with people, who could see us plainly by the light in the room, but from the sea of upturned laces there came no suggestion of escape. I made a rope of bedclothing—three pairs of blankets, two sheets and a counterpane—and apliced them together in knots which I deemed secure. It was of sufficient length to reach the ground, and, as my wife sat on the window sill, I tied one end of this rope to her waist, astening the other end to the centre piece of the window sill, I tied one end of this rope to her waist, astening the other end to the centre piece of the window sash. How did I feel? God knows how, I believed I was letting her down to life and to stay there and die. The smoke by this time was down as low as our heads, and I proceeded in the effort to lower her to the sidewalk. Her last words to me were "Let me down." I cried, "dood by, my dear, forever," for I never expected to see her alive again. I believed she would be saved by the means I had contrived, but I expected to be suffocated. I had not lowered her more than six or eight feet when she fell from some cause almost incomprehensible to the. I sat down stunned, to wait for death or antil some relief might come. I heard shouts from the other side of the street. I went to the window. People were calling to me to pull up the rope of beddlothes which I had a thrown out when my poor wife leil almost out of my arms, as it were. I do, and dound a rope attached. I put on a glove to rope of bedelethes which I had thrown out when my poor wife tell almost out of my arms, as it were. I did so, and found a rope attached. I put on a glove to prevent friction, threw my wife's diamonds, with ave thousand collars, and jewelry into the midde of the bed, got out of the window, adjusted my legs sailor-fashion round the rope, and slid down in salety to the sidewalk. About half an hour elapsed between my wife's failing from the rope and my reaching the ground. I found that she hag, been taken to the St. James and from there she was 'emoved to Mrs. Davis' boarding house on Wainut spreet, where she died in about three hours and a half. She was conscious only for a moment to know me, and that about an hour before her coath. She showed no signs of broken finbs, attnough she fell full sixty feet. She died from the horror of the shock and internal injuries.

FIRE APPARATUS -- DANGSROUS ARRANGEMENT OF THE ELEVATORS AND STAIRWAYS-NEGLI-GENCE OF THE WATCHMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:-The burning of the Southern Hotel in St. Louis recalls to the mind of the writer very vividly the scene of the burning of the Lindell Hotel in the same city ome ten years since. The chief cause of the destruction of those two magnificent houses is so giaringly apparent and is so imminently liable to produce equal or office buildings throughout the country that I feel it a duty to give to the press the real clew to the the newspapers may be raised to correct the errors that have arisen in our modern American architecture. The Lindell Hotel took fire in the fifth story, and as soon as the fiames reached the elevator shaft the embers commenced dropping down below, and in a very few minutes the elevator shaft had become a rearing fery chimney and bad communicated the fire to every story of the building. But for the combustible nature of the elevator shaft the building most probably would have been saved with but singly loss. In the Southern Hotel case the tre commenced in the basement and the elevator shaft sppears to have principally aided to complete the work of destruction. Immediately siter the Lindell fire the Southern was provided with a first class steam fire engine, with iron pipes connected thereto, and extending up through different parts of the building, and hose were attached to these iren pipes in all of the different stories of the building, ready for immediate use. This apparatus was sufficiently powerful to throw several streams of water through the ordinary kind of fire hose from the street clear over the building, as was proven by actual trial. Probably no building in the country was better supplied with apparatus for extinguishing fire, and had he watchman of the building properly attended to his fatter it is more than likely the fire would have been very quickly extinguished. There should be in all hotels the same system of regular rounds for the watchmen that a commonly practised in the best of manulactories. The watchman should be required to sarry the time detector is common use in instories, each of which time detectors is provided with a new paper face each night and with different forms of keys fixed by chains at the different stations he is required to visit dering his watch. The paper face revolves as do the hands of a clock, but is locked up in the case so the watchman cannot touch it excepting by putting in one of the station' keys and turning it. This act drives a needle point through the paper face show exactly at what moment every one of the stations was visited, story, and as soon as the flames reached the elevator sot hour and minute that particular puncture was made. In the morning, or at the close of the watch, the punctures in the paper ince show exactly at what moment every one of the stations was visited, and thus taitful aervice is secured. Had the watch man of the couthern been thus checked as to his efficiency who can doube but the fire apparatus of the house would quickly have extinguished the fire without the loss of a single life? A serious defect in the construction of the Southern Hotel was discussed by a party of geniemen while examining he soon after the Lindell fire above alluded to, and your drawing of the building published the morning after the fire furnishes a good liustration of it. By reference to the said cut it will be observed that the grand stairway, D, leading from the office floor to the second or parlor floor, and the ladies' entrance stairway, N, leading from the street to the parlor floor, were the only two stairways leading up to the second story; and the passenger elevator, C (located forther toward Fifth street than your cut represents), was placed almost between them. The two stairways leading up to the higher stories were also located in singuiar proximity to each other, and thus confined the exits of the upper stories to one particular locality, which was greatly endangered by the combustible nature of the elevator shalt. Laws should be immediately enacted requiring all elevator shalts to be built of fire proof materials only. Pinstering should not be allowed in them, as defective construction may thereby by concealed.

Hotels should be required to provide suitable fire proof stairways in different parts of the building, where the house is of considerable size, a certain amount of door area being limited to a certain amount of stairways.

Hotels should be required to keep a watchman always on guard, with sufficiently extended tours of inspection and limited times of visitation, guarded by a proper time detector placed beyond the control of the watchman. Respectfully yours,

ARCHITECT.

Your editorials having reference to the Brooklyn fheatre and the St. Louis Southern Hotel fires are teeming with suggestions to theatre and hotel proprietors, advising them to remodel and improve the interior of their establishments by introducing iron or stone stairways, having the elevators built in towers attached to the main building, with doors opening on every foor; and placing large coils of rope in convenient places for the use of their patrons and guests in case a sudden conflagration breaks out. If all this were done the work would be still incomplete, and experience teaches us the utter worthlessness of a downward means of exit in case a panic seizes the inmates of the doomed building and a rush takes place, because they will crush and trample each other in their anxiety to reach the street. The only reasonable place of exit is from the upper galiery or hallway of a building to an iron bridge suspended to a house opposite, or, if more convenient and suitable, and to entail less expense, on the same side of the street. I caunot conceive of any more convenient or accessible method of escape from a burning building; besides the expense is comparatively nothing nompared with that entailed in remodelling and sitering the interior and exterior of a building, which may (the proprietors) will undoubtedly not do. Intwelve or fourteen days all the hotel and theatre proprietors throughout the Union could have these iron passage ways attached to their buildings; and in tuture, if a sauden conflagration or false alarm of fire should occur in a crowded place of amusement, the people could escape without harm, and the press would be spared the harrowing details of a terrible loss of life. I have hopes that this plan or some other equally good one will be put in operation.
